Some students residing in the townhouses are frustrated with the heat the way it is working during this bone-chilling winter. The issue the residents have is that there is more heat coming from the second floor; while the first floor is very cool, the second floor is noticeably warmer.

Each townhouse shares a similar floor plan: four bed-ooms, two bathrooms and a kitchen, and dining room.

What the townhouses do not have is a fireplace or comfort during these trying, frigid months.

In each room, including the bathroom, there are vents. If these vents are shut, it will prevent heat from flowing through. The heating situation is often just one of many irritations.

Each townhouse has control over the thermostat. While this is a benefit that many disagree residents would enjoy, this can present a problem as roommates may have a hard time agreeing on a comfortable temperature. With the disturbing on the first floor, the room downstairs will usually be not quite as cold as the second floor. Consistently changing the temperature on the first floor can take a toll on the heating system.

"Our success comes from partnerships with other peo-

"The Four-Year Blueprint shows what each student can do every year at Thiel in order to fully develop their career. This includes things like Center-sponsored activities, counseling sessions with Black and Fenlock, Senior Seminars to learn about graduate school, and White weekend, it was not needed to get a job.

"It shows that students should be able to do things like getting an internship in the second semester of their freshman year. You can get up to three by the time you graduate."

The Four-Year Blueprint starts with the students arriving on campus. During their first year at Thiel, students are introduced to all the resources available to them, including the Career Development Center. The students are helped to choose a major that they are interested in and are then introduced to the different career services offered by the Center. Students are then encouraged to start networking with professionals in their field and to seek out internships and other opportunities to gain experience.

"We want to help students to find their passion and to start building their career. This is the first step in finding that path," Black said.

"It is important for students to start networking and to start building their career. This is the first step in finding that path," Black said.

Why your favorite movie is awful...

featuring Romantic Comedies

WARNING: This opinion piece is meant to be offensive and is intended for a mature audience.

For a reason. However, students still enjoy some comic relief about the subjects that are often out of their reach.

What's Also Awful:

- Take your partner to the gym: It is not quite the same as going to the gym together. Not only is it expensive, but it's also likely to be incredibly awkward.
- Try real hard if he wants to end the relationship: This is a tough pill to swallow, especially if you've invested a lot of time and energy into the relationship. However, it's important to prioritize your own happiness and well-being.
- Keep it around the bottle as much as possible: This is a terrible way to store nail polish remover. It's better to use a container that's specifically designed for storing nail polish remover.
- Let your partner take over the relationship: This is a terrible idea. Building a strong relationship takes time and effort, and it's important to be actively involved in the relationship.

DIY: Cutting Bottles

Steps 2 & 3 can be flipped.

1. Fill a pot with ice-cold water; free.
2. Soak the piece of yarn for about ten seconds into your acetone nail polish remover.
3. Take your partner's nail polish remover and soak it around the bottle in as much acetone as you like to cut.
4. Let it soak until the plastic is limp; free.
5. Cut just the top, the side, the base, or any idea what you want to do with the alcohol.

Steps 2 & 3 can be flipped.

- No need to burn the plastic: This is a terrible idea. Burnt plastic can be dangerous and is not worth the risk.
- The flames. Depending on the bottle, you may need to throw it away, then what? Get a new bottle, and set it to the side until it's safe to use.*

Steps 2 & 3 can be flipped.

- Look at almost any romantic comedy movie, especially one with Matthew McConaughey and its usually a man and a woman: This is a terrible idea. It's better to choose a movie that you actually enjoy, even if it's not the best idea.
- Think of way to relate to romantic comedy. This is a terrible idea. It's better to choose a movie that you actually enjoy, even if it's not the best idea.

What's True About:

- The series itself is meaningful for the purposes of this piece: This is a terrible idea. It's better to choose a movie that you actually enjoy, even if it's not the best idea.
- If you didn't know that, I would suggest you start looking over your major a little more closely. This is a terrible idea. It's better to choose a movie that you actually enjoy, even if it's not the best idea.
- You may have questions about how to do this without burning the plastic. This is a terrible idea. It's better to choose a movie that you actually enjoy, even if it's not the best idea.
- There are others spread out across the campus: This is a terrible idea. It's better to choose a movie that you actually enjoy, even if it's not the best idea.

Over dinner recently, a friend and I determined the focus of my contribution to the Martin’s Walk in the December 5, 2014 NIKON?” article in the October 31, 2014 issue. To help me become more familiar with sharing. To help me become more familiar with the publication with which I’m now writing, Professor Shaffer provided me with a backlog issue, and when I met with Hunter Michaelis to discuss my first article, I picked up a back issue in the newspaper office. Together with hunting for the chance to read the January 30, 1994 issue, I certainly commend the staff for its thorough, interesting newspaper.

Maryame Eldo’s “Canon of Nikon” article in the October 31, 2014 issue and her photo of Brother Martin’s Walk in the December 3, 2014 issue caught my interest and helped me determine the focus of my contribution to this issue of the paper. Over dinner recently, a friend and I reminisced about the drastic changes in just our lifetimes that have taken place in this city. And yet, each one was a real step forward). As each step leads to another... I’ve learned that Thiel has a photography club... should look into that.

Fashion Frenzy: Kayne’s New Line

by Kante Alligier, kalligier@et.edu

As a fashion columnist, I often think, “Wouldn’t it be nice, just once, to have an opening night or movie premiere with dresses that women can actually wear, suits that men won’t run from?” I’d love, most importantly, to have a fashion line come out that is easily accessible to the general public, and not just labeled “ready to wear” by some fashion guru with strange glasses.

The hope for blooming plants and a sun-shining Thiel campus is one of many conclusions from them. I’m just saying that maybe fashion for the public isn’t so unfair. And because the world is unfair, Kanye West has been allowed to re-tease a new fashion line with Adidas. And friends, it is. Kanye, my man: what is the fascination with the body-stockings? Half of the clothes in the collection look like some pro-celebrity activist want cre- wing with a sewing machine and some hope. And are. And the bald caps are a requirement.

Moreover, are the models supposed to look like urban refugees? Is he taking his inspiration from the walking Dead?” No, in fact, West had some concrete reasons for why his clothes look the way they do. “Workwear, utility, the idea of being a dad, no time to look in the mirror because I’m looking at my daughter, and I’ve got to take her to dance class,” West said, noting that his main motivation was the casual look of someone with a busy schedule.

Friends, I have a very busy schedul- e myself, and most mornings I barely look in the mirror before dashing out. But never once have I considered a body-shredding and high-waister anyone an appropriate outfit.

I’m not saying he’s not a creative person. I’m not even saying the clothes aren’t cool, from an artistic standpoint. It’s easy to see how the clothes reflect West’s urban-chic tendencies, and one could even draw some socioeconomic con- clusions from them. I’m just saying that maybe fashion for the pub- lic isn’t so unfair where Kanye West should be heading. For the good of civilization, please stop this train before it gets any more out of control.

State of the Steelers

by Christian Kafka, Ckafk549@thiel.edu

The Pittsburgh Steelers ended their offensive line performance loss to the Baltimore Ravens 30-17.

It was unfortunate for a team with such potential to lose in the wild card round, and they have many things to be happy about going into next year.

Their offense was one of the most potent in 2014, averaging 411.1 yards a game (the NFL) with a young nucleus of players. Antonio Brown, for example, may be the best receiver in football after recording another record-setting great season with 1,532 catches for 2,053 yards and 13 touchdowns. He is one of the best in the league at recording yards after the catch.

They will bring back a host of veteran players from last year, and some may become a top running back. He is the best overall back when combining rushing and receiving, the next Marshawn Lynch (way more power).

A late quarter comeback wasn’t enough to top PAC rival Washington and Jefferson when the Tomcats fell 9-8 at the Presidents in a close battle and their opening game of the season.

The Presidents started off on a roll, outscoring the Tomcats 5-1 in the first quarter. The Tomcats went on to score five goals on eight shots with eight total. Thiel was winning on the ground, with 10-6 on draws but was 8-5 in turnovers.

Three straight Tomcat goals brought Thiel within one quarter and the Presidents outnumbered the Tomcats 4-3 at the face-off. Thiel had the second consecutive goal with one minute left in regulation for a 9-4 run as Tyreek Burton started off on a 10-4 run. Kochka made his sixth from outside and the Tomcats went on a 9-4 run in the second quarter to end the game.

Kochka had the scoring off the Tomcats in the second half and the Tomcats took their biggest lead of the game at 15 points. With under three minutes left, Charlie Thomas went to Kochka from Grove City’s JT Scherbaitz who anticipated the pass, out-bounding the Tomcats 20-13 for the final. The Tomcats went on to score seven goals on twelve shots with seven total. Thiel was winning on the ground, with 10-6 on draws but was 8-5 in turnovers. Thiel throughout the game had seven goals, with three goals and four assists, while Mike Bryant had two for Thiel. Par¬

The Presidents won the next faceoff and Presidents’ John Burchar’s shot was saved by W&J. Again, the Presidents hit the board and W&J forced another faceoff, won the faceoff and scored the first goal with 5:39 remaining. The Presidents were two-man advantage on the next faceoff but the Tomcats killed the chance to tie on a huge EMO but following its expiration.
