Is Netflix Better Than TV?

by Ted Kremer, TedCremer@thelienmann.com

As the market for streaming continues to grow, with more and more people choosing to watch their favorite TV shows and movies online, the question of whether Netflix is a better option than traditional TV arises. While both offer a wide variety of options, there are some key differences that set them apart.

Firstly, the cost. Netflix offers a variety of plans, starting at $8.99 per month for streaming on one device, up to $17.99 per month for four screens in 4K. In comparison, traditional TV requires a monthly cable bill, which can vary depending on the package selected. While it may seem like a cheaper option at first glance, it’s important to consider the hidden costs of traditional TV, such as installation fees and equipment rental.

Secondly, the flexibility. Netflix allows users to watch shows and movies at their own pace and on their own schedule. They can pause, rewind, and fast-forward at their leisure. On the other hand, traditional TV is more rigid in its broadcast schedule, with shows being aired at specific times.

Thirdly, the quality. Netflix has invested heavily in producing high-quality original content, such as "House of Cards," "Stranger Things," and "The Crown." While traditional TV also offers some excellent shows, Netflix’s original series often receive more critical acclaim.

Lastly, the ease of use. Netflix has a user-friendly interface that makes it easy to find and watch your favorite shows. Traditional TV requires you to navigate through a menu system to find what you want to watch.

In conclusion, while both Netflix and traditional TV offer a wide variety of options, it ultimately comes down to personal preference. If you value flexibility, high-quality original content, and ease of use, Netflix may be the better option for you. But if you prefer the traditional broadcast schedule and a larger selection of shows, traditional TV might be more appealing.
